

Remembering Adolescence

We've probably traded in our Converse's for Louboutin's just as adulthood begins to set in; we shouldn't, however, lose our sense of adventure and curiosity. To honour the ode of adolescence, place that sacred skateboard on a mantel piece through Wall Ride — a practical yet versatile wall-mounted rack. For bygone days of indulging ourselves in playtime, Italian-Brazilian company Zanocchi & Starke's Wall Ride allows anyone to create an interactive display of their good ol' skateboard, make-up brushes or trusty bottle opener. Besides adding playfulness to the room, Wall Ride reignites our creative cells irregardless of age. Zanocchi & Starke is available online.

Exotic Vegetation

Keeping very much to the green theme of this issue, albeit fake, it would be nice to have some form of plants lying around. Depending on preference and taste, you can bring a little part of nature indoors with Pols Potten's artificial plants in either an outlandish shade of bright yellow, shocking red, serene blue or straight up black. Heck, you can even choose it to be the banana, fan palm, taro or cactus species. 'Grown' in fabricated leaves structured from iron and plastic stems, these artificial plants could be comical yet calming at the same time... C'mon, you know you want to reach out and feel those leaves. Available at Space Furniture.

Being plush is knowing that rug underfoot was weaved made-to-order and fully handmade, and there is always something different about products that aren't run-of-the-mill. As the Vanghent Collection demonstrates, its wide variety of handmade rugs come from all corners of the world for the elite only. With a century's worth of experience in rug production and know-how, Vanghent's techniques are something that machine-operated brands will never comprehend. By simply grazing across the weave, you'd know what great quality are the hand-spun yarns of silk, linen, nettle, cactus, wool and manmade filament yarns. Available exclusively at Tatum.

Fibrous Comfort

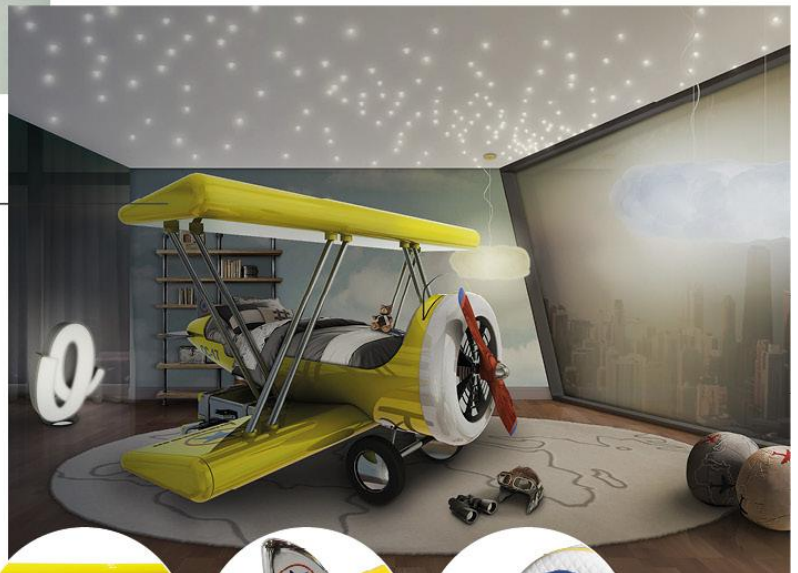

Celebrating the slower pace of life, Romo introduces the Damaris Collection, something we have all dreamt about amidst the busy city life. Taking a step back may not necessarily mean a staycation in a hotel, but just at the delicate touch of colour, clean air and countryside tranquility, everything becomes normal again. That's why the bedroom is a sanctuary and the disorder of modern life has us prying away at delicious-looking linen sheets all the more. The British design house has given the public a taste of designer fabrics and wallcoverings since the 1980s, and Romo's Damaris Collection is no different — its decorative jacquard weave with an intricate paisley damask design is woven in with natural linen to give a supple finish that's completely breathable. Available exclusively at Tatum.

Slumber In The Clouds

As far as we're concerned, children's bedrooms is the exact environment you want to be in as it is meant to spur creativity, inspiration and discipline. Those attributes alone are the foundation of Circu, a company that aspires to turn children's dreams into reality with its creations. The Sky B Plane fits the bill perfectly — after being tucked in the airplane cum bed, tiny sleepers soar in the clouds above in this decorative bunk inspired by Leadbottom, a character from Disney's animation film, Planes. Moreover, it provides every child's room with expansive storage via the plane's wings, comfort via the plush velvet upholstery as well as stability via its wooden fiber glass body. Simply search for the hashtag "#magicalfurniture" and you'll see why being a kid in this decade is a much enviable proposition. Available for purchase online.

A wall that has been stripped bare can be a frightful sight, unless the fair-faced bricks were given the experienced bricklayer's touch. If you're at your wit's end, wallpapers would be the answer to creating an atmosphere so calming that you can cocoon yourself to that very space, dampening all remedial sounds too. With Lizzo's latest collection Scene di Interni, you're spoiled for choice as differing textures are combined with murals as well as sophisticated vinyls. Nothing outlandish about it, but note the delicacy and lightness of Italian painter Elena Carozzi — the resulting grays, trendy metallics, bronzes, ecrus and brown strokes are the way to go if a serene atmosphere is what you're looking for. Available exclusively at Tatum.

Vases are meant to hold water, but what are the chances of it lasting if the vase was made of paper? We all know the outcome to that riddle, unfortunately, but the brilliant mind of fashion designer-turned-décor extraordinaire, Fita Hausdorf, has made our jaws drop with her water-resistant cellulose fiber vases. Easily cleaned in a jiffy and handmade in Germany, this inspirational product blends into homes and offices alike. Flushed in a concrete grey shade, its neutral tones surprises many as it does with its practicality. Available for purchase online.
